

AT THE COLUMBIA SHOE FACTORY

These sketches were made by a School of Journalism student who made a visit recently through the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Factory. Charles E. Ross, general manager of all of the company's factories, was inspecting the factory at the time.

RALLY, LINGUISTS;
WONDER, NOW, CAN YOU GET ALL THIS?

Gather around, linguists. These translations rhyme all right. Do they say what the German says? They were thought meritorious enough by the professor in charge to be submitted for publication. The students who made them are in their second semester of German.

DAS BACHLEIN
Du Baechelein silberhell und klar,
Du eilst vorüber immerdar.
Am Ufer steh' ich sinn' und sinn'
Wo kommst du her? Wo gehst du hin?

Ich komm' aus dunkler Felsen Schoss,
Mein Lauf geht ueber Blum' und Moss;
Auf meinem Spiegel schwebt so mild
Des blauen Himmels freundlich Bild.

Drum hab' ich frohen Kindersinn;
Es treibt sich fort, weiss nicht wohin.
Der mich gerufen aus dem Stein,
Der, denk ich, wird mein Fuehrer sein.

Thou brooklet, silvery and clear,
Thou speedest on forever here.
On thy bank, I stand and pondering ask,
"From whence comest thou? Where lies thy task?"

I come from out the mountains
And over flowers and mosses glide.
Upon my face is stamped the while
Blue heaven's kind and friendly smile.

I have a glad mind free from care—
It drives me forth, I know not where;
And he who starts me on my way
Will be my guide from day to day.

LAUNA M. SMITH.
You brooklet, clear and silvery bright,
You hasten on by day and night.
Perplexed I hear your murmur low;
Whence have you come? Where do you go?

From caverns dark, from gray rock
towers,
O'er beds of moss, through fields of flowers;
Myself a mirror in which lies
The mild reflection of the skies.

In joy, with childlike faith I go;
Where my way leads, I do not know.
But he who called me from the stone
Will guide me still; I follow on.
